1. Claims 4-8 are withdrawn from further consideration pursuant to 37 CFR 1.142(b) as being drawn to a nonelected group, there being no allowable generic or linking claim. Election was made without traverse in the reply filed on 26 July 04.

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Applicant has admitted that band saws are old and well known in the lumber cutting industry. However, Applicant has not admitted that the teeth of these bandsaws are bent to one side.

The patent to Biederman teaches bending a plurality of teeth to one side, and no teeth to the other side, in order to get a good finish on one side of the kerf. Biederman's teachings apply to all kinds of saws (lines 60-65, column 2). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to have modified the admitted prior art band saws by setting a plurality of teeth to one side, and no teeth to the other side, as taught by Biederman, in order to achieve the described good finish.

It is noted that Applicant's claims do not preclude the blade having some straight teeth.

In regards to claims 2 and 3, Examiner takes Official Notice that it is old and well known to have projecting tooth tips of generally the recited dimension. Examples of such are the patents to Kobayashi et al., Kawakami et al. and Kataoka et al. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to have made projections with the recited dimensions on the tooth tips of the modified bandsaw, in order to effectively widen the kerf and thus prevent blade binding.

4. Claims 1-3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Applicant has admitted that band saws are old and well known in the lumber cutting industry. However, Applicant has not admitted that the teeth of these bandsaws are bent to one side. An example of an admitted prior art bandsaw is the patent to Nakahara et al., who teaches that oversetting the teeth to one side can produce a curved cut (lines 48-56, column 1).

Examiner takes Official Notice that it is well known to bend all of the teeth to one side in order to create a saw blade that produces a curved cut, for making arcuate products. An example of this is the patent to Waggerman. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to have modified one of the admitted prior art band saws, for example Nakahara, by bending all of the teeth to one side, as is old and well known and taught by Waggerman, in order to create a curving kerf and thus make an arcuate product.

In regards to claims 2 and 3, Examiner takes Official Notice that it is old and well known to have projecting tooth tips of generally the recited dimension. Examples of such are the patents to Kobayashi et al., Kawakami et al. and Kataoka et al. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to have made projections with the recited dimensions on the tooth tips of the modified bandsaw, in order to effectively widen the kerf and thus prevent blade binding.

5. Made of record but not relied upon are patents to Stradling and Tsunoda showing teeth bent to just one side.
